Activity

On Sunday, we organised a one-hour performance by our faculty for the students. It featured Mohiniyattam and Kathak.

Watching live performances is an important part of learning dance. It lets students see how movement, expression and technique come together on stage.

The performance was organised especially for the students. It gave them the chance to experience what a dance performance looks and feels like. They also learned by observing the artists.

Outcome

performance traditional arts Knowing the art form Technique (adavus)

Students had the opportunity to watch faculty perform two dance forms. Through observation, they could see how dance movements and expressions are presented in a performance setting.

Learnings

Watching live dance can complement classroom practice. It helps students observe performance, movement and expression beyond their regular lessons.
